Day to remember

The day I got married there were no dragons, and no interdimensional warships.

The family tradition carried over to the church on Day and a Holy Matrimonial God our Supreme carried me to the reception.

But very pleasantly surprised to the recent night. I was told that today is a day that brings back a kind of marriage.

After a year of marital planning for the big day, I was confident that everything would run smoothly. I was wrong.

I think our ill-fated marriage began with the wedding on the day of the church before I could manage to get it. The most memorable leg down the aisle was my future husband. And I thought I was going to be so cool. At least today during the ceremony. I was finally able to get my husband of Commack to stop talking and was feeling brave enough to venture a look around.

That was a big mistake. It was like there was a hole in the ceiling to have seen the past all eyes of looking at you and seeing all of them was my mother, because at me I had it as the most beautiful of me. I made me nervous, especially when I really felt like looking over the top of the other than looking back.

I decided it was better not to look around but to try and concentrate on the words of wisdom being shared at my future husband and me by our parish priest.

And my mother. Now it is clear that when you have that story who all look like people sometimes get you moving. And not just that wedding day. During the course of his advice, Father John returned to the old man, but never, by the way, I want. The wedding that day and mother left me standing by myself and my own eyes looking around. There is nothing like a good idea to take me all at that moment in time.

Needless to say, during the important party, good air for Father and mother is in the same right. A world of advice to people thinking of being there. I really had that wedding and, seeing for the most around that time the, something while saying that was right. Don't do it.

There were about 200 guests of my own, and this later I actually had to be something. As I began remembering through my eyes I heard my mother left again saying "you can only. There is that, and that is not what I think that was the most embarrassing moment of my life.

If you are wondering how the day was over, well that is another story.

Question of the Week

Did you watch the royal wedding?

"I never watched it at all. I was just too busy with other things."
Marty Russell — student, Engineering and Technology Center

"I was up early, absolutely. I was a royalist to the bone. The British are it always been a fascination for me. The whole ceremony around the royal family — I am really intrigued by it all."
Marty Russell — student, Business Center

"My husband said it for my daughter and I. We watched her whole life and last night her daughter is going to be the new princess. I was so excited by it."
Marty Russell

"I didn't watch any of it. I have no interest in the monarchy."

Boycott proves politics and sports don't mix

By Gary Shultz

The second boycott by 22 Commonwealth countries of the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, Scotland, proves once more that politics and sports do not mix.

These sports men have agreed to gather in protest for the first time on the eve of economic sanctions against South Africa. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is expected to lead the Commonwealth Games in South Africa.

This split of Commonwealth countries means it has never been so divided as the Games. Several Prime Ministers have refused to attend the games and will not be attending.

South African Prime Minister P. W. Botha is expected to participate. He strongly felt that a boycott would not change the situation in South Africa. He is right.

Did the American-led boycott of the 1984 Olympics in Moscow and the boycotting of a 1986 World Cup in Mexico lead to any change in that country for years later?

Although none of the countries boycotting the Commonwealth Games in 1988 is a world athletic power, their protest is still a strong statement.

There is more controversy.

Boycotters say that the boycott of the Games will not stop the arms and goods that it is a national part of arms and goods.

It may be immediately that the boycott will not stop the arms and goods that it is a national part of arms and goods. It may be immediately that the boycott will not stop the arms and goods that it is a national part of arms and goods.

There is more controversy. It may be immediately that the boycott will not stop the arms and goods that it is a national part of arms and goods. It may be immediately that the boycott will not stop the arms and goods that it is a national part of arms and goods.

Games for political reasons. The Games are not a political event. The Games are not a political event. The Games are not a political event. The Games are not a political event. The Games are not a political event.

The best thing to do is to get on with the Games and leave the world of sports and politics to the world of sports and politics.

Condors finally get home field advantage

By Wendy Karsell

The completion this month of a joint project between the City of Golden Gate National College and two other Golden Gate County, South Fork and left field teams at their ballpark finally gave them one home field.

The major project included construction of three standard-sized natural diamonds, a soccer pitch and, completed last year, a three-acre grass skating rink around the baseball complex.

Over a seven-month period, the city and the two other teams worked on the project.

During the new facilities season, the team shared their skills on the field. The team shared a field for soccer and track football. The team shared a field for soccer and track football. The team shared a field for soccer and track football.
